Introducing Key ASF Hub Projects

18 May 2022, 17:00

The Action for Sustainable Future (ASF) hub is a collaboration between the University of Applied Arts Vienna and the Open Innovation in Science (OIS) Center at Ludwig Boltzmann Gesellschaft (LBG). The ASF hub facilitates collaboration between society, science and art, creating solutions with high societal relevance and impact to advance the sustainable transformation of society.

The six key ASF hub projects sit at the intersection of society, science and art and address connections between social and ecological sustainability from multiple perspectives, such as the social inclusion of marginalized groups, engaging with children's and human rights, the problem of increased soil sealing, and possibilities of sustainable resource management. All projects are participatory and are supported by recognized cooperation partners, such as Amnesty International Austria, the University of Natural Resources and Life Sciences Vienna, the Technical University of Vienna and Democratic Society.

The projects also explore new approaches to participatory research: to ensure the quality of the research-led projects initiated by social actors, the ASF hub support program provides artistic or scientific expert advice when and if required. This way, researchers and artists are involved in the implementation of projects by engaged citizens.

Key projects of the ASF hub will be introduced in the form of a World Café. This format allows visitors and participants to get to know the projects and exchange ideas.

AIL is an interdisciplinary space and a platform for projects at the intersection of art, science and artistic research. Run by the University of Applied Arts Vienna, it was launched to enable exchange among different disciplines and to link art and artistic research as these are the driving forces for innovation. AIL is a venue dedicated to developing projects, facilitating discourse between various fields of knowledge and connecting partners from the fields of science, arts, design, research and business with the resources of Die Angewandte.
